

Bob Eichen is the Chief Financial Officer for the City of Boulder, Colorado. He will become president of GFOA at the annual conference in Minneapolis. He has been a member of the GFOA executive board for four years, an ex-officio or standing committee member for five years, and has been a national instructor for GFOA on various financial topics.

Bob has served as president of the Colorado Government Finance Officers Association, served as their education chairman for 10 years, and has been recognized by his peers as a Colorado Government Finance Officer of the Year. He has been a director or manager of local government finance programs since 1979.