From Indianapolis, IN

Education

Northwestern University, Chicago and Washington, D.C.—M.S. Journalism

University of Arizona, Tucson— B.A. Marketing and Spanish

Meribeth spent 6 years television news where she worked in Albuquerque and Oklahoma City. In news she covered municipal government and crime.

After six years of working crazy hours, she decided to migrate to the corporate world where she took a job as Director, Corporate Communications, with Scrivner Inc---a privately held food wholesaler with $6.3 billion in sales, which at the time, was the third largest food wholesaler in the country.

She was then recruited to Cox Communications, Oklahoma, where she began as Communications Director then became Vice President, Marketing and Communications. Cox is the third largest telecommunications company in the country. Oklahoma was one of Cox's largest markets.

Love of horses brought her to the Dallas area—horse country— where she joined the City of Irving as Manager of Communications and Media Relations—a job she loves.
